NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—During the Thanksgiving holidays, ending today, the "joy hopper" operated in greater numbers and with more boldness than ever before and the police department admits it is at a loss how to deal with this blithesome addition to the city's pests. Not that there is much difficulty in apprehending the "joy hopper." The police can catch him, but they have trouble making a criminal charge against him stick after he is caught.

charge against and state and is caught.

The "joy hopper"—it is a word only recently added to the police vocabulary—is the young man of slack scruples rather than of any definite criminal tendency who "borrows" your car if you happen to leave it parked at a convenient curb in the early evening. He wants to take a girl to some dance. He has no car. He will make a more vivid impression if he calls for the girl with a motor, and your motor is right there and—that's that. Into your car hops the young man and off he trundles to his girl and the dance, and if you happen to and the dance, and if you happen to the evening you're out of luck, that's the evening you're out of luck, that's the covening you're out of luck, that's gives you a lump coal value at a season. And the delightful part of it is such activities will continue very active indeed throughout the Christ-active indeed throughout the Christ-mas and New Year seasons. Wherever there's a big and not too exclusive dance going on, there you will find the 'joy hoppers."

A traffic squad of the police de-partment says it's "your own fault."
"Some automobile owners are in a way a party to the misdemeanor," said one of the inspectors today, "be-cause of their astonishing careless-ness in leaving their cars without pro-tection, It is manifestly impossible for tection. It is manifestly impossible for a policeman to watch every car park-ed along the curb on his beat. Yet, automobile owners will park their cars in front of their homes or of restaurants and leave them for hours without taking more than the most perfunctory precautions against theft. This is supposed to be a cynical town, but it places more trust in providence than any other city in the country."

Accordingly, the police have warned motor owners not to park their cars, especially in the evening, without taking a look at them occasionally to see if they are still there. The motor owners have decided to do bet-ter than that, even. All sorts of quaint devices are being tried out with some success and with not a little bilarity on the part of the bystanders.

ALARM STARTLES.

Pedestrians near a hotel in East Twenty-seventh street were startled by the clang of an alarm gong, which brought people running even from Fifth avenue. It sounded like a three alarm fire, but it was merely the bur-giar alarm on a small sedan. By the time the owner emerged from a nearby restaurant, he had to call licemen to clear a way fo licemen to clear a way for him through the crowd. The "joy hop-per," if indeed it was a "joy hop-per," whose efforts started the tumult, had long since vanished.

Another device adopted by various car owners as a protection, is a mechanism which permits the car to travel for a certain distance even when the To a certain distance even when the for a certain distance even when the wheel is inoperative. But as it travels wheel is inoperative. But as it travels the car gives off an horrific red flashing light which makes it and its occupants thoroughly conspicuous in the fit Mississippi river for as- sight of citizens and traffic officers. Other car owners have adopted a complex system of locks and chains, but the "joy hopper" with an ingenuity really commendable under other cirumstances has figured out a way luding most of these traps. A go eluding most of these traps. A good many car owners are depending on the old fashioned yapping terror although they hesitate to leave the dog on guard these chilly evenings in an open car.

Thievery, be it understood, is not a part of the "joy hopper's" idea of a pleasant evening Thievery would put him at once in an entirely different class. His idea is just to borrow the car. He invariably intends to return it, and usually does so unless an ac-cident or something else untoward diverts him from his purpose. REFUSE TO PROSECUTE.

Many times the "joy hopper" is caught by the police. But with the "joy hopper" under arrest, what are the police to do? The logical charge would be grand larceny, said a mem-ber of the automobile traffic squad, but in a case of this sort it is very but in a case of this sort it is very hard if not impossible to prove the intent to steal. On the very face of things, the young 'joy hopper' is not a thief. He is usually well dressed, well mannered and on the whole rather likeable. It is plain that he and his friends were merely out for a lark. About the most we can do in many cases is to charge him with disorderly conduct. ... And the discouraging thing is that And the discouraging thing is that in 50 per cent of such cases, the owner of the car refuses to prosecute. He's mad enough when he first asks us to trace his automobile but after he sees the "joy hopper" was just trying to make a flash with some girl, he won't appear against him.

Meanwhile as the jazz waxes on merrily, the police are almost tearfuily begging people to keep an eye on their cars. The car owners are almost tearfully begging the police to do likewise. And the "joy hoppers," with their

And the "joy hoppers," with their lady friends are having a perfectly lovely time.
